

Shoes Given Away.

Every day one of our customers is presented with a pair of shoes FREE OF COST.

In addition, we sell for

$2.65

Shoes which will cost you $3.00 or $3.50 elsewhere.

Extraordinary Bargains To-day

Ladies' Button Shoes, sizes 1 to 9, (which used to sell for $2.50 to $4.00).

Only $1.50.

THE WARDEN SHOE HOUSE,
GEO. W. RICH,
919 F STREET,

WE WILL GIVE A PAIR OF FINE Kid Gloves

To the holder of the picture (The Morning Mail) given away with this Sunday's issue. The number of the picture will be announced in Monday's issue.

WATCH FOR IT.

Only 39c.

For the choice of 1,000 Colored Cashmere Caps, Silk finished, full Pompon of same goods, and trimmed with Nutria Fur. Full wide strings. To fit children from 6 months to 3 years. Now bring the Baby and get him fitted. 39c. for a Cap that is worth double the price is an opportunity that don't happen often.

Lansburgh & Bro.
420, 422, 424, 426 7th St.

Our $7 Sets of Teeth

Are exactly the same as the $10 and $15 sets of other dentists. Absolutely the best materials and workmanship—nothing else—also put into "egg" consultation.

AMERICAN DENTAL ASS'N.
COR. 7TH AND E STS. N.W.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Licenses to marry were issued yesterday to the following: Edward Nye McKinnin and Mollie Stump; Alfred T. Harnett, of Boston, and Lillian B. Warner.

MARRIED.

HULSE-KLUCKHEIM—On October 2, 1894, EDGAR A. HULSE to LYDIA A. KLUCKHEIM. No cards.

ROBERTSON-ALEXANDER—On Wednesday, October 10, 1894, JOSEPH A. ROBERTSON to ROSA A. ALEXANDER, at St. Dunin's Church, by the Rev. Father Walsh.

DIED.

DREW—On Friday, October 12, 1894, at 12:30 a. m., NARY E. DREW, wife of Col. William O. Drew, at her residence, 1307 Thirtieth street, north-west, in the sixty-fifth year of her age.

Service at West Street Presbyterian Church at 3 o'clock p. m. Monday, October 15, 1894, at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, October 16, 1894, at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, October 17, 1894, at 10:30 a. m. Burial at Oak Hill Cemetery. Relatives and friends respectfully invited to attend.

MCKINNEY—On Thursday, October 12, 1894, at 8:30 p. m., CARROLL, son of James H. and Virginia D. McKinnin.

Funeral services at the residence of his parents, 1520 Rhode Island avenue, to-day (Saturday) at 3 o'clock p. m. Inquest private.

MORRIS—On Wednesday, October 10, 1894, at Fayetteville, Lawrence county, Pa., ANN R. MORRIS, in the seventy-fifth year of her age, widow of the late Rev. Nathaniel Morris.

Funeral services at Lincoln Memorial Congregational Church, corner Eleventh and B streets northwest, Sunday, October 14, at 11 a. m. Communion and friends invited.

(New York papers please copy.)

SWOONED.—On October 10, 1894, at 2:30 a. m., CATHERINE S. SVOON, of paralysis, in the fifty-seventh year of her age.

Funeral will take place to-day (Saturday), at 3 o'clock p. m., at her late residence, 309 Third street southeast. Relatives and friends invited.

Aided by Puss.

Having an ambition to be something more than he could be to "settle down" in the quiet village amid the hills of the Granite State, where had always been his home, Chester Adams devoted his spare moments to study and graduated from college when only twenty-two years of age.

He was so fortunate as to at once secure a situation as principal of the high school in M—, Pa., on a salary that would enable him to rapidly catch the indebtedness he had incurred while obtaining his education.

Possessing an attractive personal appearance, a pleasing address, and a vast amount of so-called "magnificence," he won the friendship of all whose acquaintance he formed, and in a short time was one of the most popular young men in M—.

Particularly was he a favorite with the members of the gentle sex, among whom was one, Mary Townsend, a handsome brunette of twenty years, and, confessedly by all the belle of the place.

Between the two a mutual regard sprang into existence, which gradually developed into a more ardent feeling, causing her to decline the proffered homage of other gentlemen, while he showed marked attention to her.

He had been in M— less than a year and a half, when he said to her: "I have come to love you as I never loved any woman—as I never shall love another, and ask you to share life's joys and sorrows with me."

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure," she replied, slightly blushing, "as my love for you, Chester, must be fully as strong as is yours for me. But I do not think I should do right to promise to become your wife without mother's consent."

"I certainly should not wish you to do so, and should never have made a declaration of my love for you had I not felt assured I could gain your mother's ready consent to our marriage."

Now, though her worldly possessions were decidedly limited, Mrs. Townsend thoroughly understood how to make every cent count, and had moved in the best society of M—.

When Chester asked her for her daughter's hand in marriage, she calmly rejoined:

THE SHOPPER'S GUIDE

(Consult to-day's TIMES for full details.)

Reilburn & Co.—Gents' Congress Gaiters, $1.95; Ladies' Dongola Shoes, $1.48.

S. Bieber—Boys' $10 Suits Reduced to $6.25.

Samuel C. Palmer—2 Dozen Pint Bottles Pilsener Only $1.25.

Willett & Ruff—Complete Stock of Fur Capes and Trimmings.

Emrich Beef Co.—35 Pounds of Round Steak To-day for 25c; Other Goods at Special Prices.

Robinson, Chery & Co.—New Style Derby Hat for $2.

James V. Davis' Sons—Youman's New York Hats.

Lansburgh & Bro.—Children's Colored Cashmere Caps 30c. Keep Your Picture and Read "Ad" in Monday's Issue for prize number.

Grogan—Choice Plush or Harecloth Parlor Suits, $22.30; Solid Oak Bedroom Suits $14. Brussels Carpet, 50c. per yard.

Warren Shoe House—Every day one customer gets a pair of shoes free.

C. Warfield Simpson—Blue and Black Reverts at $20. Good Overcoats from $20 up.

Dyrenforth's—Suits and Overcoats at $10 and $15.

Wanamaker & Brown—Low prices and quick work. Garments kept in repair free for one year.

American Dental Association—Full sets of teeth for $7.

Weinberg & Co.—Best tailor-made clothing at lowest prices. Overcoats, $15 up; Suits from $13 to $40; Pants $3.50 to $12.

George Spransy—Black Cheviot Suits, only $10.

H. Friedlander & Bro.—Children's Suits $2.50 up; Men's Suits and Overcoats, $9.75 to $14.50; Trunks, $2.00 and $2.50.

Henry Farr & Son.—The Best Derby Hats for $2.40.

Garner & Co.—Boys' Combination Suits, $1.48; Men's Black Cheviot Suits, $6.50; Overcoats at $10.

Plymouth Rock Paints Co.—Latest Styles in Tailor-made Clothing for little money.

Saks & Co.—Stylish Suits for $7.50, $12.50, and $15. Number of "Times" Picture Drawing Prize to be Announced Monday Morning in "Ad."

Louvre Glove Co.—New and Delicately Finished for Ladies and Men, 75c. to $1.00.

Parker Bridget & Co.—All Wool Knee Pants Suits for Boys, $2.50.

Strasburger's—Wonderful Bargains for Ladies and Men in Underwear and Handkerchiefs.

King's Palace—Ladies' Coats, $3.98; Plush Caps, $8.50.

Moore's Shoe Palace—$2.50 Ladies' Shoes for $1.98. Other Shoes at Low Prices.

To-morrow's Menu.

Breakfast.

Fruit.

Cracked wheat with sugar and cream.

Waffles.

Potato puddings.

Wheat muffins.

Coffee.

Supper.

Beefsteak.

Boiled Potatoes.

Macaroni au gratin.

Tea.

Dinner.

Cream of tomato soup.

Crabbed oysters.

Broiled oysters.

Straw beans.

Apple sauce.

Waffles.

Cheese.

Coffee.

Crabbed Lamb Cutlets.

These cutlets make a delicious entrée. Have three slices about half an inch thick, cut from a leg of lamb. Mix well in egg two tablespoonful of lemon juice, half a teaspoonful of onion juice, half a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and two tablespoonful of oil, and rub the mixture over the slices of lamb. Cover the dish in which the meat lies and put away for an hour or more. When ready to cook the cutlets, spread them lightly with melted butter and dip them in fine bread crumbs. Cook in a double broiler over a moderate fire for eight minutes. Serve with any delicate sauce.

New Lunch Cloths.

Lunch cloths are shown in a variety of new designs this fall. Many of them, with finger bowl and tumbler doilies to match, are truly artistic. Pure white cloths of glistening damask are the most fashionable. A new cloth shows a border of large, pancies carefully scattered about the edge. The round tumbler doilies are of fine linen, with a wreath of small pansies encircling them, exquisitely embroidered in white silk. The larger finger bowl doilies are shaped like a pansy, with the shading of the blossom outlined in white silk. Many of the new tray cloths are furnished with a scalloped edge and the doilies have the same border. A damask table cloth suitable for a Christmas dinner bears a clear and artistically arranged design of holly and holly berries.

FANCIES OF THE SEASON.

The brocade silks for fall wear are nearly all in two, three, and four-tone colorings. Elegant fall evening wraps are lined with moire and with plain or brocade satin. The outspread Valkyrie wings that are

Between the two a mutual regard sprang into existence, which gradually developed into a more ardent feeling, causing her to decline the proffered homage of other gentlemen, while he showed marked attention to her.

He had been in M— less than a year and a half, when he said to her: "I have come to love you as I never loved any woman—as I never shall love another, and ask you to share life's joys and sorrows with me."

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure," she replied, slightly blushing, "as my love for you, Chester, must be fully as strong as is yours for me. But I do not think I should do right to promise to become your wife without mother's consent."

"I certainly should not wish you to do so, and should never have made a declaration of my love for you had I not felt assured I could gain your mother's ready consent to our marriage."

Now, though her worldly possessions were decidedly limited, Mrs. Townsend thoroughly understood how to make every cent count, and had moved in the best society of M—.

When Chester asked her for her daughter's hand in marriage, she calmly rejoined:

mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his

AS A LAST RESORT.

Despairing Efforts of a Government Employee and the Result.

Have you suffered so long that you are in despair? Have you tried doctor after doctor until you have lost faith in all of them? Try once more. There is one physician who, beyond all question, cures where others fail, and that is Dr. Walker, of 1411 Pennsylvania avenue. Mr. Walker, a resident of the Interior Department, says:

"About three years ago I became afflicted with sciatica, and equal to other much suffering. My condition became so bad that I eventually lost all power of my legs, and then the liver, kidneys, and bladder, and in fact, my whole system became deranged. I tried several physicians, but received no lasting benefit from them. With the same result I tested the waters of Hot Springs, Ark., and Mount Glenora, Mich. I was failing rapidly when I heard of Dr. Walker, but under his treatment I immediately relied and began to improve. The palus left me, my liver, kidneys, and other organs began to perform their functions. I recovered my lost flesh and strength, and to-day I am as well as I ever was."

Dr. William S. Bowers, who resides on the Mitchellville road, Prince George county, Md., writes: "I never had much faith in doctors, but I am free to confess that Dr. Walker's treatment has cured me of nervous troubles. I made me an invalid for many years. Everybody who is sick ought to know about him, and you are at liberty to use my name and the enclosed picture."

The American Society of Fine Arts in New York intends to hold an exhibition of portraits of American women this autumn. The agents of the society are looking in every direction for portraits of women of celebrated beauty and of prominence. A most interesting exhibition is anticipated.

Vassar College's forty-seven instructors will include this year fourteen of her own alumnae, some of whom have been added this year. These are the instructors in mathematics, Latin and English, and the assistant in biology.

Mrs. Minnie Hawk sang at Johore recently by invitation of the Sultan, the prince, and the queen, who were guests of honor. She was accompanied on the piano by her husband, the order of the Crown of Johore, this being the eleventh order. Mrs. Hawk has received from the Sultan of Johore a letter of appreciation for her services.

Fanny Crosby, the blind Methodist hymn-writer, is now seventy years of age. She has written about 3,000 Sunday-school hymns. In 1858 she was married to a physician, who was blind also.

Mrs. Frances Willard devotes eight hours of the day to work, eight hours to sleep, and the remaining eight hours, as she expresses it, to doing as she pleases.

A very large number of women have joined the gymnasium of the Utah School of Physical Culture.

"The Times" Fashion Hints.

This is a beautiful model of the latest new wrinkle for having the skirt and sleeves of one material and the bodice of another. Silvery gray Eclair forms the skirt and the skirt, which are huge leg of mutton affairs, also pointed girdle and cape collar. The trimming is embroidered in silver done by hand on the silk, tiny spangles being introduced in the embroidery to lighten the effect. The bodice is of white chiffon, and the dress is a vision of refined elegance.

CHURCH FALL REUNION.

Members of the E Street Baptist Church Spend an Enjoyable Evening.

The members of E Street Baptist Church greeted each other heartily last night in the church parlors. It was the fall reunion after the summer vacation, and the enjoyment marked the occasion. Due to the fact that it was within a few days of Rev. J. J. Muir's sixth anniversary as pastor of the church.

The lectures were crowded all the evening with members of church and congregation, and the crowd was as happy as it was big. Music and short addresses filled up the first hour of the evening. Miss L. E. Elliott and Mr. T. H. Riley sang a duet, followed by Mr. A. M. Clapp in a short solo. Mr. Clapp, who is pastor of the church, is president of the church corporation and society, and spoke in their behalf. He congratulated the church upon its prosperity and upon the pleasant relations that have always existed between pastor and people. He also sketched briefly the history of the church during Mr. Muir's pastorate.

Miss Ather sang a solo, and Dr. S. H. Green, of Calvary Baptist Church, made a short address. He said that many pleasant things about Mr. Muir's pastorate were the church on its successful rounding out of its sixth year as pastor, and prophesied increased prosperity and continued harmony in their church relations. Miss Elliott sang a solo, Rev. Dr. Saunders, deputy third auditor of the Treasury, made a short address, and Mr. Riley sang a solo, which were all warmly received.

Mr. Muir replied fittingly to the remarks that had been made. He thanked the members for their cordial and hearty support in the past, and urged them to zeal for the future, pledging himself to their service with added vigor and earnestness.

After the audience sang "Best Be the Tie," the ladies of the church served refreshments, and a couple of hours were passed in social enjoyment.

"I have unintentionally wronged you, Mr. Adams, allowing the intimacy which has existed between you and Mary, and ignoring the natural consequence thereof. But, when she married, it is my most earnest desire that she should become the wife of one who will raise her to a higher social position."

This he interpreted as a "refusal," and he made no attempt to prolong his conversation with her.

Going to Mary, he told her of his interview with her mother, kissed her, bade her "Good by," and left her in tears.

"Love laughs at all obstacles," generally cares for nothing but to accomplish its ends, by fair means or foul. Yet, while confident that Mary would become his wife—confident contrary to her mother's wishes—he was to urge her to do so, his sense of honor would not permit him to pursue such a course.

He sent in his resignation to the board of education, to take effect at the end of the term, and it was reluctantly accepted, after all efforts on the part of the board and of his pupils to have him retain his position had proved futile.

During the three weeks that he remained in M—, subsequent to his interview with her mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local schools; then he drifted into literary work, from which he derived a comfortable income if not distinction.

The death of his mother, whom he had fairly idolized, left him alone in the world, save for a cat, his mother's pet, for which he cared as tenderly as one could for a child. Since his late episode in M— he had given no consideration to women and had come to be regarded as a "woman-hater."

As he sat in his writing-room one August afternoon, busily occupied with his thoughts, he heard some one in the street exclaim:

"What a handsome cat! Kitty! Kitty!"

Raising his bowed head he looked into the street to see two ladies who were facing his mother, he neither saw nor held any communication with Mary.

Nearly fifteen years have elapsed since his departure from M—, when we again introduce Chester Adams, who is keeping bachelor's hall in the village of M—.

Six years before he had returned to this village in order that he—an only child—might care for his widowed invalid mother.

For four years after coming back to his home, he had supported his mother and himself by teaching local